

Wood Nesting Native Bees

- Australian Native Bees will often take over old beetle holes in dead trees and logs in forest ecosystems.
- It is important to provide a range of safe ecological niches that foster biodiversity.
- Consider preserving or adding wooden nest sites in existing revegetation areas.

Top Right (clockwise)
Golden-browed Resin Bee (Megachile aurifrons)
Photo – Michael Duncan
River Red Gum – Photo David Barnes, NSW DPI

For more information...

www.centraltablelands.lls.nsw.gov.au

facebook.com/CentralTablelandsLLS
twitter.com/CTablelandsLLS

